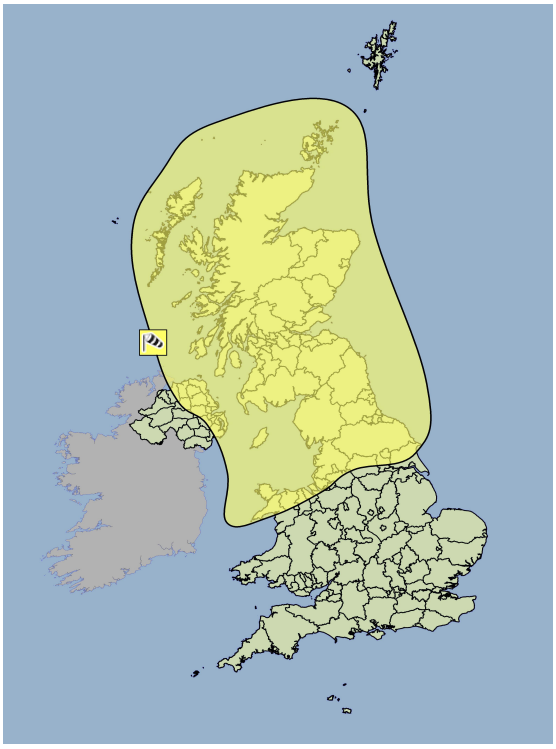
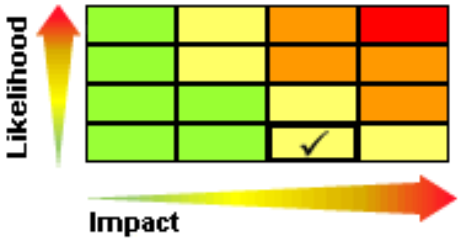
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Strong winds developing around the western and southwestern flanks of a deep area of low pressure, will lead to gusts of 50-60 mph around exposed northern coasts and locally 40-50 mph inland across much of northern Britain, particularly in association with heavy showers. Winds will probably peak in exposed northwestern areas during Sunday evening and again along northeastern coasts early on Monday.

While such wind gusts would not be unusual in the autumn and winter, they are likely to pose a few more problems coming in the summer holiday period: as such, some minor disruption to transport and outdoor activities is possible, for example delays to ferries, bridge restrictions and perhaps minor damage to trees.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Wind

Valid from 09:00 on Sun, 17th Aug 2014 until 09:00 on Mon, 18th Aug 2014

Gales are likely to develop around exposed coastal areas of northern Britain during Sunday and overnight into Monday morning. Very strong inland gusts are also expected, particularly in association with heavy showers.

The public should be aware of possible minor disruption, particularly to transport.
